Works Consulted

In order to provide our students with the most accurate and up to date citation guide document, we consulted five sources. While most of these documents concur with each other about formatting sources in MLA and APA, there are some minor differences. Below is a list of the resources consulted:

· MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers, Sixth Edition
· Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association, Seventh Edition
· Prentice Hall Reference Guide, Seventh Edition
· Noodle Tools
· Purdue University’s OWL www.owl.english.purdue.edu
I. Part One: Information to Get You Started

A. Rationale for Citing
While there may be issues that are discussed for years in a variety of ways, if a writer uses an idea or wording that someone else has used, the initial writer must be given credit. Each format style has specific formulas for quotations (a copy of the exact wording) or a paraphrase (use of an idea presented in your own words). Failing to do this, results in Plagiarism.

Citing (or giving credit) also allows a reader to go back to the sources to read them firsthand. To ensure that a reader understands every citation, a standard format style is used. Some examples of format styles are the American Psychological Association (APA) or the Modern Language Association (MLA). Standardization means that by looking at a citation, anyone familiar with the format style used can distinguish the author’s last name from the title of the journal.

B. Plagiarism
The MLA defines plagiarism as “using another person’s ideas, information or expressions without acknowledging that person’s work” (Gibaldi 66). APA similarly states, “that an author does not present the work of another as if it were his or her own work” (Publication Manual, 2003, p. 349).

Plagiarism is a type of cheating. You may receive help writing your paper; however, it cannot be written for you. Purchasing a research paper or having any other person write a paper for you is plagiarism. As a student of Ivy Tech Community College, plagiarism is a serious offense. The penalty could be the failure of that assignment, the failure of the course, or the suspension from college. Your rights and responsibilities can be found in the Ivy Tech Code of Student Rights and Responsibilities: https://www.ivytech.edu/files/Code-of-Student-Rights-Responsibilities.pdf

C. Fundamental Differences Between MLA and APA

<table>

<th>American Psychological Association (APA)</th>

</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>• Used for liberal arts and humanities: art history, classics, English, modern languages, Music, philosophy, religion, and theater courses</td>
<td>• Used in psychology and social sciences. Here at ITCC the business, human services, and health sciences divisions also use APA.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Requires in-text citations (author’s last name page)—See page 411 in Harris</td>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>• MLA follows conventional capitalization rules</td>
<td>• APA does not capitalize all words in book and article titles but does capitalize names of magazines and journals</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• MLA uses the authors’ full first names</td>
<td>• APA initializes the authors’ first names for example Jill Smith would be Smith, J.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• MLA abbreviates months</td>
<td>• APA does not abbreviate months</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• MLA differentiates in the formatting of dates for magazines and journals; for example, a magazine’s date would be formatted May 2008 and a journal’s would be formatted (May 2008).</td>
<td>• APA does not differentiate in the formatting of dates for magazines and journals.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• MLA emphasizes the author and the title of the publication by placing them near the beginning of the entry.</td>
<td>• APA emphasizes the author and the date of publication by placing them near the beginning of the entry.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• MLA does not use the URL’s on the Works Cited page for online subscription databases</td>
<td>• APA uses DOI numbers for online scholarly journals that have DOI numbers and document ID numbers on the References for the online subscription databases</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• MLA requires the student’s last name and page in the header (Smith 1)</td>
<td>• APA requires the topic of the paper and page in the header (Antibiotic Resistance 3)</td>
</tr>

II. Part Two: In-Text Citations, Works Cited, and References

A. In-Text Citation Format

Special Note: In both MLA and APA (only for direct quotes in APA), page numbers are used in the in-text citations. If no page numbers are available, consult OWL: In-Text Citations for APA: https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/560/02/ and MLA: https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/747/02/

MLA:

If the author is named in the signal phrase, only a page reference (if available) is needed for in-text citations:

According to computer expert John Smith, “People, not computers, will create Millennium Mania” (23).

If the author is unnamed in the sentence, provide the name and page number at the end:

One computer expert claims that “people, not computers, will create Millennium Mania” (Smith 23).

APA:

If the author is named in the signal phrase, include the year of publication in parentheses and a page reference at the end to refer to a specific passage:

According to Smith (1999), a computer expert, “People, not computers, will create Millennium Mania” (23).

If the author is unnamed in the sentence, provide the name, date and page number at the end:

One computer expert claims “people, not computers, will create Millennium Mania” (Smith, 1999, p. 23).

In the examples in this citation guide, the APA or MLA in-text citations would follow paraphrased passages or quotations in which the author is unnamed.
III. Part Three: Works Cited and References Examples

A. Audio Recording

MLA
Works Cited Format:
Writer's Last Name, First Name. “Song Title.” Performer's Name if Different from Writer.

  Recording Title. Manufacturer, Issue Year. Publication Medium.

MLA In-Text Citation: (McCain).

APA
References Format:
Writer's Last Name, First Initial. (Copyright Date). Song Title. [Recorded by Artist if Different than Writer]. Album Title. [Recording Medium]. Location: Label. (Recording Date if Different than Copyright Date).

APA Direct Quote In-Text Citation: (McCain, 1997).
APA Paraphrase In-Text Citation: (McCain, 1997).

B. Blogs

MLA
According to Purdue University’s OWL, online writing lab, there is no official set of formatting rules for Blogs. Please check with your instructor about how he/she would like a blog formatted.

APA
Author’s Last Name, First Initial. (Date of publication). Title of blog entry. Message posted to web address.

  http://www.loc.gov/blog/category/washington-dc/

APA Direct Quote In-Text Citation: (Gavin, 2009, p. #).

MLA In-Text Citation: (Irele #).

APA
An online scholarly journal article with a DOI, Digital Object Identifier.
According to Allen Brizee (2009), who edited Purdue OWL’s APA “Reference List: Electronic Sources,”:

Since online materials can potentially change URL’s, APA recommends providing a Digital Object Identifier (DOI), when it is available, as opposed to the URL. DOI’s are an attempt to provide stable, long-lasting links for online articles. They are unique to their documents and consist of a long alphanumeric code. Many-but not all-publishers will provide an article’s DOI on the first page of the document.

Note that some online bibliographies provide an article’s DOI but may “hide” the code under a button which may read “Article” or may be an abbreviation of a vendors name like “CrossRef” or “PubMed.” This button will usually lead the user to the full article which will include the DOI. Find DOI’s from print publications or ones that go to dead links with CrossRef.org’s “DOI Resolver,” which is displayed in a central location on their home page. (Online Scholarly Journal Article section, para. 1-2)
References Format:
Author. (Date). Title. Journal Title, Volume(Issue), Pages. doi:#.

An online scholarly journal without a DOI

IV. Part Four: Ivy Tech Community College Virtual Library databases:

Citing an article or publication retrieved from an electronic database
When using the following Ivy Tech Community College Virtual Library databases to access sources, you have retrieved the material from a subscription service database (sometimes called aggregated database). To enable your reader to duplicate your resource retrieval, your citation must differ from that of an on-line journal (eJournal), newspaper, encyclopedia, or e-book that you accessed through the open internet.

Formats to cite subscription database material vary, so the style formats of the following authorities were consulted:

OWL at Purdue University. (2009). Home page. Retrieved April 6, 2009 from Purdue University.

Basic Formats for Virtual Library Online Databases
*Always check with your instructor for their individual preferences.

   name Middle initial. Editor’s Last name. # ed. Vol. # Publication City name: Publisher,

   Year of publication. Database name. Publication medium. Date of access.
APA:
For Journals, Magazines, and Newspapers:
A note about DOI numbers: When this document was being updated, articles in the Ivy Tech Community College databases could not be searched by DOI, Digital Object Identifiers, numbers; therefore, you have the option to use document numbers as available.

Author's Last Name, First Initial. (Year). Title. Title of Journal, volume (issue), paging. Retrieved from database. (document number when available).

For e-books:
Author's Last Name, First initial. (Year of publication). Title of book. Publication city, State if needed: Publication company, (Date of original publication if applicable). Date of access, from Database name.

For Encyclopedia:
Author's Last name, First initial. Title of article. (Year of publication). Encyclopedia name. Date of access, from Database name.

A note about document numbers: Document numbers are numbers given to documents within some databases for easier reference. The document numbers are specific to each individual database. They may be termed Document ID, Document Number, Record Number, or Accession Number. Including them in the citation of your reference also allows your instructor more accessibility to your original source with greater ease. All databases that use document numbers are noted in the examples with the appropriate numbering.

This handbook has been compiled so that instructors and students alike may utilize the same formats for documentation in student writing assignments across the curriculum. This guide is a continuing version of the work begun by the Carter Library staff at the Evansville campus. These examples use the 7th edition of MLA (Modern Language Association) and the 6th edition of APA (American Psychological Association) formats. Also, the examples represent commonly used sources in the Ivy Tech Community College Libraries.
