Immigration

Immigration involves moving to a new country with the intention of settling there permanently after leaving one's country of citizenship. In many cases, immigrants go on to become citizens of the receiving nation. Tourists, foreign students, and others who visit or reside in a country temporarily are not considered immigrants. In 2017 the United Nations (UN) Department of Economic and Social Affairs reported a worldwide total of 258 million people living in a country other than the one where they originally held citizenship, including people who immigrated in previous years. The United States has been the world's leading destination for immigrants since 1960. In 2016 the United States hosted nearly 50 million foreign-born residents, including legal permanent residents (LPRs), undocumented...
